The image displays a 64-square grid arranged in an 8 by 8 pattern. Each square has a thin black border. The colors of the squares transition through a gradient, likely representing a grayscale or depth map. The first three columns of the grid are predominantly pink and red, with the red being most prominent in the third column. The remaining five columns show a more continuous and distinct gradient, transitioning from dark purple at the top to light purple, then pink, then red, then magenta, then cyan, and finally teal at the bottom. This pattern repeats across all eight rows.
